LifeSafety Power® Multi-Site Manager-Enterprise™

Wins 2018 New Product of the Year Award

Power reporting across multiple access installations for proactive enterprise management

August 17, 2018—LifeSafety Power® Inc., Mundelein, Ill., the industry's only provider of intelligent networking power solutions, has won the coveted 2018 New Product of the Year Award from Security Today for Multi-Site Manager-Enterprise (MSM-Enterprise). MSM-Enterprise received the award in the Power Supply Technologies Category—with the accolade citing its "outstanding product development achievements," according to an announcement by the publication. Headquartered in the Chicago area, LifeSafety Power has shifted the landscape of power products with a new, networking centric concept that brings valuable intelligence to protected premises security and access control installations.

MSM-Enterprise is the only industry solution that provides detailed information on the present operability of systems and viability through data extracted on power variances or voltage events. PC-software driven, MSM-Enterprise can manage hundreds of power-connected systems and extract critical information, including charts, graphs and other analytical data for proactive site management. Users get instant access and data to monitor, assess, maintain and troubleshoot solutions quickly and easily. MSM-Enterprise allows security dealers and integrators to provide customers with a new, higher level of managed power services that maximize uptime and reliability.

LifeSafety Power's products have received numerous awards since its founding in 2009 and the company also won a NPOY accolade in 2014 for the Helix Redundant Power Systems.

"There is real genius behind the products that have been entered and I'm pleased that we can help bring this new technology to the forefront of the security industry," said Ralph Jensen, editor-in-chief and content director of Security Today. The award program is now in its 10th year and includes 47 product categories—judged by an independent panel of experts. Winners will be recognized during GSX18, September 25-27 in Las Vegas. LifeSafety Power will be exhibiting at booth 2765 during the show.
