LifeSafety Power® White Paper details many benefits of LSP remote power monitoring

Mundelein, IL – December 1, 2015 -- The power supply is a critical part of the interoperability of any security or life safety system and now remote monitoring of power solutions can be your new managed service. Remote monitoring as a managed service ensures the entire installed solution receives the power needed to operate correctly. Integrators also have, through these total solutions, the ability to generate new billable services through remote reporting, while remote test and diagnostic functionality further saves technician time and labor.
